

The Beauty of Pailloonné Enameling by Jaquet Droz

The fabulous technique of blending of both gold and azure is called pailloonné enameling. The complicated process of pailloonné enameling is quite delicate and requires a high level of craftsmanship and attention to detail.

The artisans at luxury watch brand Jaquet Droz have become experts in this creative field, dating back to the 18th century. Jaquet Droz just unveiled three new limited-edition watch models that feature intricate pailloonné enameling on the luxury watch dials.

The process of pailloonné enameling entails several firings at temperatures that can actually near a whopping 1000 °C. The Grand Feu enamel process used by Jaquet Droz produces beautiful watch pieces and are works of art in their own right.

To ensure that the color is consistent, a trained eye is needed to carefully observe the time consuming process. The motif of the watch is then created utilizing gold pailloons that have to be carefully placed in just the right position. The end result is spectacular!

The three new luxury watch models from Jaquet Droz include a 39 mm Petite Heure Minute, a 50 mm pocket watch, plus a 43 mm Grande Seconde. Each watch is unique and the motif design is stunning. The creation dazzles with circular forms that create the beautiful floral theme that is elegantly done by Jaquet Droz.

The pailloonné Enameling process has been used on luxury timepieces for almost three centuries and Jaquet Droz introduced their three watch models at this year's Baselworld show.

The blued steel hands of the watch mirror the stunning ultramarine dial. The watches come with a red gold case and either a black or blue alligator leather strap that appears to reflect the watch's gleaming pailons.

The new Jaquet Droz watch collection is available in a limited edition of just eight pieces per watch model.

If you are a luxury watch connoisseur and want to ensure you are purchasing an authentic watch at the correct value, then contact The Life of Luxury to assist with the buying process. Stay abreast of new luxury watch news by following this luxury blog.