One thing that stands out is the off-center subdial of the Petite Heure Minute watch. It's located at 12 o'clock position. The reasoning from the watch designers, is the placement would allow a lot of space available on the watch dial. Based on an ancient method that was popular from the 10th to 14th centuries, "Najeon Chilgi" was utilized. A flower landscape was created in white mother-of-pearl. The design is lacquered, followed by a polishing process. The final touches were completed using artistic hand-painting. The end result is a stunning array of flowers made from shimmering colors.

The watch dial is made from 18-carat red gold. The subdial is onyx. The case is 35 mm in diameter and made from 18-carat red gold case.

The feminine, Petite Heure Minute Thousand Year Lights watch comes in five different versions. Each version is a limited edition of only 28 pieces. The watch case comes in either white or red gold. You can also choose between one set in diamonds or none.

The watch has power reserve of 68 hours and s self-winding mechanical movement. It also has a water resistance of 3 bar or 30 meters.

The Petite Heure Minute Thousand Year Lights watch is available in either a deep blue or black alligator strap. The strap buckle is made from 18-carat red gold ardillon. The elegant look definitely adds to the beauty of the luxury watch itself. As you know, a little bling can go a long way in the world of fashion.
